

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

January 23, 2017

Greene Co. Named Semifinalist in Harvard's 2017 Innovations in American Government Awards Competition

SPRINGFIELD, MISSOURI – The Ash Center for Democratic Governance and Innovation at the John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University, has recognized Greene County's open-book management program, The Great Game of Government, as part of the 100 programs named as Semifinalists in this year's Innovations in American Government Awards competition. The County will compete to be named a Finalist in the competition and have the chance to be awarded the $100,000 grand prize in Cambridge this spring.

Greene County advanced from a pool of more than 500 applications from all 50 states, and was selected by the Innovations Award evaluators as examples of novel and effective action whose work has had significant impact, and who they believe can be replicated across the country and the world.

Greene County's Great Game of Government is an effort to create widespread financial literacy among all County employees. It is one of the first government organizations to adapt Jack Stack's open-book management model, The Great Game of Business.

The Great Game of Business, whose offices are located in Springfield, provided the training, while Greene County employees adopted the culture change and implemented open-book management's new way of viewing County finances. Raising awareness of how each employees' actions impact the County's bottom line has produced tremendous savings for their departments or offices, as well as for the County as a whole.

"These programs demonstrate that there are no prerequisites for doing the good work of governing" said Stephen Goldsmith, director of the Innovations in American Government Program at the Ash Center, "small towns and massive cities, huge federal agencies and local school districts, large budgets or no budgets at all — what makes government work best is the drive to do better, and this group proves that drive can be found anywhere."

The Semifinalist programs represent a cross-section of jurisdictions and policy areas, and embody one of the most diverse and sophisticated groups that have advanced to this stage in the competition's 30-year history. They were invited to complete a supplementary application last fall, answering in-depth questions about their work, the process of creating and sustaining their programs, and how they believe they can teach others to do what they do. The Ash Center expects to announce 10 programs that will be named Finalists and be invited to Cambridge to present to the Innovation Awards Program's National Selection Committee in March, with the grand prize winners to be named in June.

Please visit the Government Innovators Network at <http://innovations.harvard.edu> for the full list of Semifinalists, and for more information regarding the Innovations in American Government Awards.

For more information, contact:

Trysta Herzog

Director of Communications, Greene County
417-771-9859

Daniel Harsha

Associate Director for Communications, Ash Center
617-495-4347

About the Ash Center for Democratic Governance and Innovation

The Ash Center for Democratic Governance and Innovation advances excellence in governance and strengthens democratic institutions worldwide. Through its research, education, international programs, and government innovations awards, the Center fosters creative and effective government problem solving and serves as a catalyst for addressing many of the most pressing needs of the world's citizens. For more information, visit www.ash.harvard.edu.